What market, what society, what Union?

The European thought of Francisco Lucas Pires, 20 years later.

4 de outubro de 2018 | Faculdade de Direito da Universidade NOVA de Lisboa | Anfiteatro B

Francisco Lucas Pires was one of the most original and insightful discussants of European Integration. In his works he analyzed and argued with vivid energy and profound thought about the nature, setting and challenges of the European Union, from his unique perspective of an academic and MEP. In the 20th anniversary of his untimely death, NOVA School of Law organizes this international conference to debate Lucas Pires' thoughts as laid in his last book Amsterdam: from the Market to the European Society. The conference brings together renowned academics from a younger generation to discuss his ideas in light of the current situation (and problems) of the European Union.
